(Former President)

- A short description -

Recently, the term Global South receives a great deal of attention. This lecture explores the nature of the coalition of developing and emerging countries, what kind of unity exists within the coalition, what role the Global South can play in shaping the future world order, how the advanced countries should respond, and what role Japan, with its favorable relationships with developing countries, should play.

MODERATOR: Prof. Kenji Hirayama

(Dean, Nagasaki University Interfaculty Initiative in Planetary Health)
